Production Group representatives from ELAD, NEAAD, and JPRS deserve great credit for the special project they undertook recently to translate the large volume of documents related to El Salvador. The success of the effort has been amply shown by the high priority which the Department of State and other organizations have given to the translations, and the important use which has been made of them. The ability of those involved to respond quickly and effectively to the requirement levied on them is indeed praiseworthy. Please convey my personal appreciation to [redacted] and the other individuals who contributed to this very fine effort.
